Headline:
Severe gales for northern and eastern Scotland during Sunday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Band of light rain and drizzle will clear southern England late evening, then clear spells with scattered showers in the west. More frequent showers across northern Scotland, merging into longer spells of rain, as winds strengthen to give severe gales.

Sunday:
Windy with severe gales across northern and eastern Scotland, easing later. Good deal of dry weather with sunny spells, although showers frequent at first in the far north.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Cold start Monday. A weakening band of cloud and rain sinks southeast. Blustery showers follow across the north from Tuesday. Remaining cloudy with further rain in the south. Mostly mild.
